John Carley is a member of the firm's casualty litigation practice where he defends clients in complex civil litigation matters including personal injury, premises liability, construction defect, wrongful death, product liability, and catastrophic injury cases.

Before joining Bullivant, John served as the primary associate attorney assisting in the defense of a prominent glass manufacturing company in a multi-million dollar class-action lawsuit. In separate, related litigation, he gathered facts from tens of thousands of documents needed to develop complaint filed on behalf of glass manufacturer against state agencies and the Governor's Office. In both cases, John had exclusive responsibility for third-party discovery, which involved drafting and issuing more than forty subpoenas to local, state, and federal agencies and other companies, which generated hundreds of thousands of responsive documents.

John has also advised and assisted several startups on matters including choice of entity and entity formation, licensing, trademark registration, raising capital, changes in ownership, corporate governance issues, and amending operating agreements.

John received his J.D. from the University of Oregon School of Law and graduated magna cum laude with a B.A. in History from the University of Southern California. During law school, John served as a Managing Editor for the Oregon Review of International Law.
